Agency workers regulations... are you ready?

A recent survey by Reed showed that with only 3 months to go until the Agency Worker's Regulations (AWR) come into force, the majority of businesses still aren't sufficiently prepared for the scale of administration that complying with the new rules will require.

The new regulations come into force on the 1st October 2011...

The Bribery Act 2010: A simple overview

The Bribery Act was introduced because our existing law was out of date and out of step with laws in many other countries. The two main features of the Act are the introduction of:

- A new corporate offence of Failing to Prevent Bribery.
- A standalone offence of Bribery of Foreign Public Officials...

Making your CV e-mail friendly

We have all heard the statistics about how long it takes for an employer or recruiter to form an opinion of your CV and make a decision on its suitability for a role (10-15 seconds according to some reports).

In addition to ensuring that you have covered all the essentials accurately – education, employment history, key skills and experience, you also need to consider how to make your CV as email friendly as possible... Read More
