

How I Became Technician of the Year

I am passionate about animals. Having completed my BTEC National Diploma in Animal Management at college I needed a job. My first week with Agenda was nearly my last. It was a very steep learning curve and I nearly fell off! I hadn't been away from home before.

Agenda has supported me all the way. It is a good company which pays for your travelling to and from placements and your accommodation which is never far from your placement. Any courses that you wish to go on to develop your career are paid for. Even if you're on standby they still pay you.

I have worked with a variety of animals at various places throughout the country. I feel I have acquired loads of experience.

Each year Agenda honours someone as the Technician of the Year. This year I was the winner. I achieved the award by being dedicated to my job. Somehow I managed not to be off sick last year. I also managed to post my timesheets off on time.

At the moment I am in a placement where they look after me and encourage me to develop. It's great.
